COURSE DESCRIPTION

This seminar is designed to develop a critical understanding of the relationships between forces of gender and the environment through a careful examination of the interactions between politics, economics, and society. How might women be disproportionately affected? Who benefits and who suffers from environmental degradation caused by globalization and urbanization? What affects will climate change have on women, families, and communities? To accomplish these objectives, students will critically engage schools of thought concerning gender, feminist theory, environmental dynamics and political economic arrangements across local and global spheres.

As we move through foundational theories in gender and natural systems (ecology), we will investigate major concepts in the field, such as what creates unequal distribution of socio-environmental inequalities across the urban arena and global sphere. How these different “places” inform responses to structural arrangements. This course provides students with the conceptual tools for work in environmental analyses, political economic thought, and gender and women’s studies, as well as methods to make connections across these fields to other critical forms of knowledge production. In turn, we will extensively consider the interconnections among gender, development, and natural systems. To that end, each student should dedicate themselves to devoting adequate time to contemplate the readings prior to each class meeting and structure thoughtful contributions to class discussion.

COURSE LEARNING OUTCOMES

1. Gain insights into political, economic, and social forces that shape gender and the environment.
  - Assessed via weekly abstracts, class participation and discussion leadership, and final term paper.
2. Understand crucial aspects of nature-society interactions, paying particular attention to how power operates across local and global spheres.
  - Assessed via weekly abstracts, class discussions, and the final term paper.
3. Increase familiarity with theoretical and empirical insights from feminist theory, sociology, environmental studies, and development literatures that inform nature-society interactions.
  - Assessed via weekly abstracts, class discussion, and the final term paper.
4. Improve understanding of basic scientific principles, methods, and analysis.

- Assessed via weekly abstracts, class discussion, and the final term paper.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

1. To gain key insights into relationships between the environment and gender, with an emphasis on political, economic, and social processes at the local and global levels of analyses.
2. To develop skills in synthesizing information, theoretical frameworks, and diverse array of methods in creative and beneficial ways. Additionally, developing a rich background in associated literatures.
3. To apply a cultivated understanding of particular political economic theories (e.g., through case studies) and how they relate to environmental dynamics, problems, and solutions.
4. To enhance knowledge of the complexity of globalization and urbanization processes as they relate to environmental dynamics through study of relevant theoretical and empirical knowledge.

PROGRAM LEARNING OUTCOMES

This course addresses the following program outcomes:

1. This course addresses how social scientific methods may be applied to the study of human behavior, organizational processes, and institutional processes.
2. This course uses theories and concepts of the social sciences to investigate real world problems.
3. This course will help students develop a critical awareness, which they can apply to texts in order to be critical consumers of knowledge.
4. This course expands student understanding of interdisciplinary scholarship and cutting-edge debates in the field.

GRADING & EVALUATION

The calculation of final grades is based on the following components:

Weekly Abstracts (40%) Starting the second week of class, each student will prepare an integrative abstract and set questions on required readings that will be available to all class members prior to our weekly meeting. These are to be written in your own words. Distribution will be through the class Canvas page DISCUSSIONS section. Integrative abstracts should attempt to identify key issues and ideas in the weekly readings, but strive to go beyond mere synopsis of the material, which we all will have read. The goal, instead, is to integrate the information, which can take a variety of formats. You might do this by focusing on conclusions and implications and/or by raising a paradox or central question about the topic of the readings. Integrative abstracts should treat strengths and weaknesses of the material, as well as make connections to other topics we have covered. Students can comment on whether the author's evidence really supports what they set out to do and the conclusions they reach. Be contentious; take a strong stand that will spur class debate. All submissions should include a minimum of two discussion questions related to the readings: One should be a lingering question for you, and the other a question that will promote class discussion. If you wish, you may include questions that identify issues that are unclear, undeveloped, difficult to interpret, or which are particularly interesting such that further discussion and elaboration by the class is warranted. Both abstracts and questions will be used to orient class discussions. These abstracts should be relatively short; approximately two pages using standard margins, regular size font (12 point), and double spaced (though it is entirely plausible to accomplish the objectives in less space). Students will submit eight integrative abstracts throughout the semester, worth 5 points each. The abstracts are due 24 hours prior to class meeting each week. I will grade only the first eight abstracts you submit; you may not submit more than eight to replace poor scores. You may not submit an abstract on the week you lead discussion.

Class Discussion & Participation (10%) The portion of your grade is comprised of performance in class discussion, including the class you lead. Members of the class will sign up to lead class discussion (you will sign up electronically, stay tuned). Class discussion leaders are expected to combine their own reading of the material with insights gained from the summaries and questions submitted by other class members to create a coherent agenda for class discussion. Each of you will lead discussion once during the quarter. The responsibilities of the discussion leader are to facilitate the fruitful discussion of readings, introduce connections to earlier topics, incorporate questions individuals might have, and ensure there are no lulls during class. The latter—ensuring there are no lulls in discussion—is the most important role of the discussion leader. Thus, be sure to prepare a list of thoughtful questions for discussion. Leading class discussion does not require a student to lecture on the topic or the readings. The discussion leader carefully reads and reviews the commentaries and questions from the other students in the class. They organize the questions from the students in the class by looking for similarities and grouping the questions into categories. They then lead the class in discussion the questions. The discussion leaders are NOT responsible for finding the one and only correct answer to the questions. I will begin each class period with a preamble to introduce broad topics of discussion, treat the themes of the readings, and relate to the foundational aspects of other work considered. The discussion leader(s) will pick up from there to procure a fruitful discussion of the material. IMPORTANT NOTE: Points are deducted if you fail to come to class prepared to contribute to discussion. That is, if you are found to be disengaged, inattentive, and/or distracting during class (or if you fail to come to class), your class discussion grade will be reduced.

This is an opportunity to exercise your intellectual autonomy. To this end you may want to incorporate related information from current, relevant media. You will be evaluated individually on the clarity and accuracy with which you discuss the readings and as a group, on the extent to which you facilitate class participation and understanding. The point of this assignment is to give you experience planning and leading a seminar. I encourage you to be creative and have fun with the assignment and you are welcome to meet with me beforehand for any assistance I may be able to offer. Be organized; you should prepare an outline of how you want to structure the class discussion and have a list of topics and questions. Here are some suggestions for approaches that have worked well in the past. To begin, brief presentations of salient points, which can be done with a list of questions/topics/unresolved issues that you plan to address. Make connections. Draw on current events, media representations, and your own special knowledge to move the discussion in certain directions. Your presentation should bridge what we have already read with the current set of readings. Multimedia, film, etc. may be used. Refreshments are always welcomed.

Term paper & presentation (50%) Students will pursue a final research project—individual or collaborative, your choice—and deliver an oral presentation based on your research at the end of the semester. Topics must be relevant to the course, typed, double-spaced, and include proper citations (see ASA Style Guide). As a guideline only, papers should be about 12-18 pages, not including tables, figures, and references. You may do a paper based entirely on library research and literature review on a topic, and/or empirical analysis of an available data set. Graduate students are highly encouraged to carry out empirical analysis and create a final product that is publishable in article format. If you are doing a similar paper for another class or have done such a paper previously, please inform me in advance. A short description of your plans for your research paper is due the second class, Tuesday (1/16/2018), or earlier. This description should include about two paragraphs introducing what you plan to do, its importance and relation to course materials, and list about 10 sources you've found that look useful—see Canvas for more information. You are strongly advised to start early; this is a major piece of work that cannot be left to the last week. Please see information sheet on Canvas for further information on preparing your research paper.

Grading. Grades are determined on a traditional academic scale.

A 93-100%	B+ 87-89%	C+ 77-79%	D+ 67-69%	F 0-59%
A- 90-92%	B 83-86%	C 73-76%	D 63-66%
	B- 80-82%	C- 70-72%	D- 60-62%

Required class materials. Will be available on canvas or by using the library website to access journal articles.

COURSE POLICIES

Attendance & Participation Your attendance and thoughtful participation in classroom activities are critical to success in this course. Any absence will cause you to miss essential information. You are responsible for all announcements and verbal instructions provided in class, whether or not you are present. Be on time to class and be sure to turn off your cell phones. Disruptive behavior and/or excessive absences can and will have a bearing on your final grade.

Use of telephones is strictly forbidden in class. You may use your laptop computers to take notes and look at articles only. If the use of laptop computers becomes distracting, then they will no longer be allowed in class. See this article on the perils of multitasking.

- ❖ Ophir, E., Nass, C., & Wagner, A. D. (2009). Cognitive control in media multitaskers. Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, 106(37), 15583-15587.

Email responses. I will do my best to respond to your emails within 48 hours of receiving them. However, make sure that if an issue does arise that you let me know as soon as you can so that we may plan accordingly.

Important Note on the Reading The reading for this class is not easy. In some cases, you will need to read the material more than once and spend considerable time and effort to figure out what the tables, charts, and graphs are saying. The best strategy is to read through the material at least once before it is scheduled for discussion in class and then read it again after it has been discussed. You will want to bring readings and notes to class each day so that you have those materials handy for class discussion and activities.

Community expectations. This class is a community of learning and will function best when we all agree and abide by principles of reciprocity, fairness, compassion, and collaboration. The following are some good guidelines on how to support one another in the classroom. For more information on the below topics see for a start (https://cee.ucdavis.edu/docs/2017/teaching-support\_resources/11\_zMicroaggressions%20and%20Microaffirmations%20JiTT%20Resource%20FULL.pdf).

Pro-active approach to micro-aggressions: Microaggressions are a forms of systemic everyday symbolic violence, such as daily, intentional or unintentional, verbal, behavioral, and environmental indignities. They can be layered assaults that include insults or judgements related to race, ethnicity, citizenship, gender sexual orientation, age, type of college (4-year vs. transfer student), immigration status, language, disability, socioeconomic status, and religion. Microaggressions found in classrooms and other educational settings can have a psychological, academic, and physical toll on those who experience them. To foster safe learning environment for all those in this learning community, please:

- Be intentional about creating space where all feel safe, supported, and encouraged to ask questions and participate.
- Respect: be respectful of classmates, professor, guests throughout all class activities.
- Nonjudgemental approach—disagreement without putting other people down
- Openness: avoid assuming and assigning intentions, beliefs, or motives to others.
- Recognize and respond to microaggressions when they occur.
- Do not assume that all are familiar with U.S. or others cultures
- Do not make assumption about gender, race, ethnic background, religion, etc. when presenting material, asking for opinions, or making a commentary
- Always feel free to seek assistance or advice from on-campus resources (a non-exhaustive resource list prepared by CEE is attached)

Information on microaggressions adapted from Quan, Tracy. 2014. “The Toll of Microaggressions on Academic Performance,” The CETL Blog. June 13.

For more information on implicit bias see Project Implicit (Harvard University; <https://implicit.harvard.edu/implicit/>).

Code of Academic Conduct. The Code of Academic Conduct applies to all undergraduate students, full-time, and part-time, at UC Davis. UC Davis expects and requires behavior compatible with its high standards of scholarship. By accepting admission to the university, a student accepts its regulations (i.e., Code of Academic Conduct: <http://sja.ucdavis.edu/files/cac.pdf>) and acknowledges the right of the university to take disciplinary action, including suspension or expulsion, for conduct judged unsatisfactory or disruptive.

Plagiarism. With all the materials that you use, be sure to cite the source. Note that plagiarism includes the direct lifting of text and re-stating of arguments without citation from texts in any language, not just English. If you use a website, include the URL and the date you accessed it. Cutting and pasting from a website that is not acknowledged is plagiarism. Students caught plagiarizing will be referred to Student Judicial Affairs and receive a "zero" for the assignment. For additional information on what constitutes plagiarism, go to: <http://sja.ucdavis.edu/files/plagiarism.pdf>.

Americans with Disabilities Act for Students with Special Needs Statement. Any students with disabilities or other special needs, who need special accommodations in this course, are invited to share these concerns or requests with the instructor and contact UC Davis Student Disability Center for disability access: <https://sdc.ucdavis.edu/>. Students who have, or suspect they may have, a disability should seek services through Disability Services. Students must be registered with Disability Services and receive written authorization to obtain disability-related accommodations.
